ADVENTIST CHURCH

Rufus B. McDannel, Pastor
Sabbath School Lesson 5 for Aug 1, 1970.
Subject: Christ, The Messiah
Keytext: "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." 2 Tim. 1:12
In order that men might find deliverence from sin and death it was necessary that they recognize their Deliverer when He should appear; they must have convincing evidence of His divine comission. To this end, God placed on record in the Old Testament a series of prophetic utterances in which He foretold every significant fact about the person, the coming, the life, and the death and resurrection of the Messiah.
Lesson Outline – 1. We Have Found the Messiah, John 1:35-37; 40-42. 2. A Prophet Without Hoor – Matt. 13:54-57 3. The Testimony of Eyewitnesses – I John 1:1-3. 4. Fulfilled Prophecy. – 2 Peter 1: 16-19. 5 Convincing Evidence – Luke 24:25-27, 32, 44-46. 6. Personal Conviction –2 Tim. 1:9-12.
The experience of the apostle Paul in accepting Christ, and His role as the great foreign missionary of New Testament times as well as writer of a major part of the New Testament, prove that a person who is not an eye witness can be just as certain about the gospel record as the eye witnesses themselves were. Thus Paul's emphatic declaration, "I know whom I have believed" is fraught with meaning and assurance to us today. Paul knew. So can we. So "cheer up" brothers and sisters in faith for soon the night of trial and suffering will end and then will dawn the glad morning of peace and perfect day.

CHAD, NEW MISSION FIELD FOR ADVENTISTS

Newest mission area entered by Seventh-day Adventist is the little country of Chade in the heart of Africa, members learned here Saturday, Aug. 1, 1970. Located just below the great Sahara Desert, Chade nestles close to the equator, reports Albert Badenman, director of the Adventist's small mission at Fort-Lamy in southern Chad. Its population of 2.6 million face problems of ill-health and educational needs which the church hopes to solve.
Top priority will be given construction of a maternity clinic and dispensary in the vicinity of Fort Lamy, Badenmann stated in his report to the church. Currently under construction is a mission headquarters in the capital of the republic. The new clinic will bring the number of Adventist Clinics around the world to 193 says, Mrs. Vaden Townsend, superintendent of the Sabbath School of the Appomattox Adventist Church. There are 134 Adventist hospitals in operation throughout the word she adds.
Small churches in every country contribute to the total mission program of the church, which assures continuity of service once a field is entered explains Mrs. Townsend. Mission funds are divided up according to need, and missionaries receive both support and directives from the church division and world headquarters. Their greatest source of support are the Sabbath schools of the Church. For this reason members receive reports weekly from various sections of the world, making Adventists – perhaps the most geographically knowledgeable people in the world.

Cucumber Is 27 Inches Long

Lucado, of Evergreen, said that dry weather had just finished off his garden until the recent rains which made this cucumber along to its 27" length. So far it's the largest cucumber of its kind to be brought in to the TIMES-VIRGINIAN. For Mr. Lucado and others, the very welcome rain meant that gardens are once again thriving. For others it was a case of working overtime with the lawn mowers to keep the tall grass trimmed.

Mrs. Baird was particularly complimentary about the countryside of Appomattox county. She said she enjoyed getting away from the noise of New York.
She visited Spring Mills Museum on Sunday and chatted with Mrs. Mary Turner, the manager and guide as they looked over the old flour mill, the gift shop and nature trail.
Mrs. Baird said that she enjoyed, also, a night away from the "big-city" motels and a stay at the Parkway now under the ownership of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Paine. She remarked that more restaurants should be featuring good Southern food as does the Parkway Restaurant and that she enjoyed a "second time around" the generous buffet offered there.
As a Sunday morning sidelight she shared some of her experiences in the Holy Land with one of the Sunday School classes at Appomattox Court House Presbyterian Church.

CVCC Will Expand Center

A capital outlay project for $100,000 has been approved for the expansion of student center facilities at Central Virginia Community College. Tentative plans show the project providing 5500 square feet of new space and renovation of the present student lounge facilities.
The new construction will provide space for the students to eat their meals and relax between classes, and office and work space for the student government and student publications.
Renovation of the existing student lounge will provide space for a bookstore and two small classrooms.
The present schedule call for construction to start later this fall with completion early in the spring of 1971.
At a commuting college, such as CVCC, an adequate student lounge is a necessity. Since the College has no cafeteria or other facility dedicated solely to food service and since the students have no dormitory rooms in which to relax or study between classes, the student center must provide space for both of these functions.

Eye Bank Funds Eye Research

RICHMOND –Over $7,000 in eye-research grants by Old Dominion Eye Bank in the fiscal year just concluded was announced by Dr. Walter Mayer, Chairman of the Board of the Eye Bank.
Largest donation was a grant of $5,000 to the Department of Ophthalmology, Medical College of Virginia, for eye research and study. A grant in the amount of $1,837 was given to Dr. L. Benjamin Sheppard, of Richmond, for continuing research and study of glaucoma. Two Medical College of Virginia Residents were provided with registration fees, totalling $200, for a special corneal surgery course at Harvard University, and another MCV Resident was granted $150 for expenses in connection with a corneal surgery course at Southampton, N. Y.
While the principal activity of the Old Dominion Eye Bank is the solicitaton, receiving and distribution of human eye tissue for sight - restoring corneal transplants, Dr. Mayer pointed out that continuing research efforts by the Eye Bank and others have made possible transplant cases which, ten years ago, were inoperable.

Class of '60 Holds Reunion

Ten years ago they wore caps and gowns, but for Saturday night's reunion of the Class of 1960, Appomattox High School grads donned more casual attire to enjoy a picnic dinner in the high school cafeteria and later, a dance, at the American Legion Building. Many of the graduates had their families with them, including numbers of charming youngsters who missed getting into the picture by a mere click of the shutter. Honored guests were Mrs. Ivey Holland and Mr. Holland, Myron Richardson, class president, presided. Marshall Goin and Mrs. Ann Robinson were among those who made arrangements for the evening.

Use Of Seatbelts

RICHMOND – "The best dressed driver today wears a seatbelt," said John T. Hanna, Director of the Virginia Highway Safety Division.
Quoting National Safety Council statistics, he said that last year's national traffic death toll of 55,200 could have been cut by from 8,000 to 10,000 if all car occupants had worn seatbelts at all times. It is also indicated that seatbelts did save from 2,500 to 3,000 lives. Hanna added that they prevented many thousands of injuries and reduced the severity of many that did occur. He added that universal use of seatbelts could add 3 1/2 million hospital days annually for non-traffic patients.
Commenting on some of the main objections to seatbelt use, Hanna said that a car occupant has a five to one better chance of escaping death if he stays within the car than if he is ejected. As to fear of being trapped in a car, he noted that less than 1/2 of 1 percent of all crashes invole fire or water to an appreciable extent. If the wearer is trapped but conscious, he can quickly undo the belt, as can rescuers if he is unconscious, If he is unconscious and trapped and there are no rescuers, it makes no difference whether he is belted, except that a belt would work to prevent unconsciousness.
Regarding the use of seatbelts on short trips, he observed that three out of four traffic deaths occur within 25 miles of the homes of the victims and that more than half the crashes producing death or injury occur at speeds of less than 40 m.p.h.

A home modernizing plan for people who hate to give up a beautiful 5½% mortgage.
The home you bought five or ten years ago may not be the carefree, modern beauty you'd like to buy today.
Maybe the kitchen doesn't have all those up-to-date conveniences. And it doesn't have a panelled family room (which you didn't need then because you didn't have a lot of family). And the laundry room is two floors away from the laundry. And there aren't enough bedrooms.
But there is one thing about your home that looks more beautiful every year. The old mortgage.
It may have cost you around 5½%. A bargain compared to today's high mortgage rates.
How to move up without moving out.
If you've decided that this just isn't the time to buy your dream home, at least you can make the most of what you've got. With a plan that creates new space within old walls. That makes adding space easier.
Modernizing with electric heat.
Consider, for example, your old furnace and fuel tanks. They could be eating up a lot of valuable space that might be turned into a cheerful family room or den.
Perhaps bulky radiators or floor furnaces are taking up valuable space that could be used to make rooms larger. (Aren't uncluttered walls and floors one thing you love about today's new homes?)
Maybe you'd like to add an extra bedroom and bath. But you know your present heating system won't handle the extra load.
Electric heat. The problem solver.
Today's modern electric heating systems can solve all of these space problems. And give you cleaner, safer year round comfort as well.
Consider all the options available with electric heat.
If you want to use existing pipes and ducts, you can change your fuel-burning furnace to a space-saving electric furnace or boiler. No fuel to burn, no fuel tanks, no smoke, no air pollution.
Or you can put a "heat pump" outside to save more space. And enjoy heating and cooling for year-round comfort.
Or you can replace everything – especially bulky radiators and floor furnaces – with modern electric baseboards. And enjoy clean, uncluttered rooms that open up all kinds of decorating possibilities.
Electric baseboards also simplify adding extra rooms – and give you another feature of total electric living: room-by-room temperature control.
